The key to this code block is in knowing that constructors are called prior to getters. This allows us to execute our code before the Visualforce page communicates with our controller. This pattern of using properties and setting their initial state in the constructor is very common and uses a lot less code.

A: Answer They are both equally fast. The thing with the apex pro tkl is that they have Omnipoint adjustable switches. In other words the fastest switches for gaming. The apex pro 7 tkl doesnt have that but regardless will still improve your gaming. It's also not as pricy as the apex pro tkl. I recommend waiting for that apex pro tkl to restock.
