One of my all-time favorite books is Daphne du Maurier's "Rebecca". It has the best opening line of the thousands of books I have read: "Last night I dreamt I went to Manderley again". Only nine words - nine words that set the stage perfectly for what was to follow. In my youth I read several other du Maurier classics and enjoyed them all.

Daphne DuMaurier's "Frenchman's Creek" stinks to high heaven. The stench only worsens when one considers her other, alarmingly good, novels "Rebecca" and "My Cousin Rachel." The far-fetched plot centers on a young noblewoman bored with the tedium of her marriage.
